Things to consider before hiking the Jockey Hollow Trail

Your Cub Scouts and families should be prepared for their hiking experience at Jockey Hollow. Strong consideration should be given to the below list of things to do before you come to ensure a fully enjoyable experience.

1. One or more of your unit's adult leaders and/or parents may want to consider taking the hike for themselves in advance – and ask them to bring their Cub Scout with them. In this way they can understand how the other families and boys in the unit will respond to the experience while at the same time getting a better understanding of the trails and rest areas.
2. You may wish to conduct a pre-hike meeting. In addition to discussing the points below, you can discuss the importance of Jockey Hollow and preview some of what the families are going to be seeing there. You can also prepare and begin some of the advancement requirements you might choose to pursue (which are found later in this pamphlet and throughout the BSA advancement literature).
3. Review what appropriate hiking attire families should wear depending on season and weather conditions (unless it's been raining, sneakers are okay for this hike).
4. Give a list of items that you suggest families bring as personal gear. These may include:
 - a. First aid kit
 - b. Filled water bottle
 - c. Trail food
 - d. Flashlight
 - e. Sun screen
 - f. Whistle
 - g. Rain Gear
 - h. Etc. (best to leave the pocket knife at home for this outing)
5. Review the Buddy System in detail.
6. Provide detailed instruction on the BSA Outdoor Code as well as the Leave No Trace front- and back-country guidelines
<http://www.scouting.org/scoutsource/OutdoorProgram/LeaveNoTrace.aspx>
7. Discuss types of poisonous plants that exist in the park, provide solid tips on how to identify them, and give guidance on what to do if anyone accidentally touches one.
8. Make sure you review with your Cub Scouts and families what they should do if they become lost or separated from the group.

9. Make sure that at least one unit leader is trained in Youth Protection and Weather Hazards. Talk through with your families about how to prepare for marginal weather conditions. Arrange to have your unit's first aid kit and an appropriately trained adult present to help with any emergencies.
10. Much of the hike runs adjacent to the park's roadway loops. You may want to have one vehicle from your unit shadow the group and meet up with them at rest stops and parking lots to top off with water, have snacks, and/or be available in case of emergencies.
11. Be sure to review the Commitment to Safety, the Guide to Safe Scouting, Risk Assessment Strategy, as well as Camp Standards planning tools. www.Scouting.org
12. Call the park at 973-539-2016 x210 in advance to schedule your trip and to arrange to have the Wick House open for your visit.
13. It is best to read the map on the last page in color. If you are able to print it in color that would be best. Also, if you are able to print double sided pages please do so.
14. This information is to be used as a reference guide only. Although we have strived for accuracy, the Patriots' Path Council, BSA cannot be held responsible for any historical, trail or park information it contains.

You may also want to consider other activities that you may want to accomplish during the outing. A trip to Washington's Headquarters (See Jockey Hollow Miscellaneous Information sheet in this packet) other advancement topics, or the Junior Ranger program (details below). Be creative and have fun!

Junior Ranger Program

Your unit may also want to consider participating in the National Park Service's Junior Ranger Program. Participation in the program gives youth and families the opportunity to uniquely explore and learn about their national parks, and how they can help protect them today and into the future. Details about the program and some of the activities that need to be completed before you go can be found at:

The Jockey Hollow Encampment December 1779-May 1780

“It was December 1779. Having lost most of New England, and one of their armies surrendered at Saratoga, the British moved the war south. However, the redcoats still held New York City, and General Washington must keep a watchful eye on those rascals. He needed a safe place to winter the Continental Army and maintain that watch!

After conferring with General Nathaniel Greene, the army's quartermaster, General Washington ordered his army to march for Morristown. Referred to as the Military Capitol of the Revolution, vital storehouses and bake ovens were located there. Also, the area offered enough space, trees and water to support the 10,000-11,000 soldiers soon to arrive. The main army would camp at Jockey Hollow, an area of farms some five miles south of town. Nine brigades, comprising troops from several states, like Maryland, Pennsylvania and Connecticut, would call it home for the next six months. The New Jersey Brigade, the last unit in, camped two miles further south. General Henry Knox and his artillery units set up camp closer to Morristown.

Huts sites were located along the sloping hillsides in Jockey Hollow. Each brigade was allotted an area 320 yards long by 100 yards deep. The quartermasters laid out a uniform plan: eight huts per row, with three to four rows, for the enlisted men. Officers' huts were spaced behind and uphill, with wide streets between. During the two months it took to build the 1,000-1,200 huts, the army slept in tents. As schoolmaster Ebenezer Fitch called it, the soldiers built 'a log house city.'

Unfortunately for the soldiers and Morristown's citizens, they experienced the worst winter of the 18th century. The horrendous weather, combined with a worthless currency, meant vital supplies were often not available. Soldiers lacked proper clothing, sufficient food, and the pay promised them. Over 1,000 men deserted the army, while others stole what they desperately needed. Maintaining discipline was a constant problem for General Washington. During that hard winter of 1779-1780, the army's battle against the British had been temporarily replaced by a battle for survival. That his army endured these hardships can be attributed to General Washington's determination to overcome those obstacles, keep the Continental Army united, and the cause for Independence alive.

The Ford Mansion, in Morristown, served as General Washington's headquarters. Assisted by his aides, including Alexander Hamilton and Tench Tilghman, Washington worked many winter months deciding the army's strategies for the 1780 campaigns. Fortunately, in April, ministers of France and Spain arrived to reaffirm their countries' commitments to the American's fight for freedom. In May, General Lafayette, returned from his diplomatic mission to France. His news: King Louis would send warships and 6,000 soldiers to support the Continental Army! With this vital help, General Washington might achieve what he long sought to date: victory!"

A History of Scouting in Jockey Hollow

Fred Bruehne and Warren Wheeler of Troops 25 and 27 in Madison, NJ put together the first Jockey Hollow Trail, in 1960 as a 17 mile overnight hiking and camping event. The Arrowmen of the Allemakewink Lodge of the Order of the Arrow helped to maintain the trail and it was officially opened in May, 1962. Some of the original Trail markers can be seen on trees along the trail.

The idea was that Scouts from New York, Newark and Jersey City could hike and camp along the trail as a weekend adventure. They could travel by train to Peapack on a Friday and hike to the then Schiff Scout Reservation by dinnertime and camp overnight. The next day, they would hike to Jockey Hollow and set up camp at the Grand Parade. On Sunday they would hike to Morristown to visit the Ford Museum-Washington's Headquarters, returning home by train in time for dinner. Scout Troops would also hike the entire Trail in one day to earn the Hiking merit badge.

The legacy of the Jockey Hollow Trail teaches Scouts about the history of Morristown during the Revolutionary War and the hardships the soldiers endured during the harsh winter of 1779-1780.

The Hike

As you arrive at the Visitor Center let the Park Ranger know you will be hiking the Cub Scout section of The Jockey Hollow Trail.

Start your visit with the viewing of the video “Morristown, Where America Survives”. (This takes approx. 10-15 minutes)

This informative video is an excellent introduction to what is now the Jockey Hollow National Park. (To start the video go to the rear of the seats and press the button)

Go from the visitor center to the Wick House. It was refurbished by the Civilian Conservation Corps in 1934 to reflect its original historical appearance of winter of 1779-1780, when the Commander of the Pennsylvania Line General St. Clair made his headquarters there while living with the Wick family (Mary age 61, and daughter Temperance, age 21). Henry Wick, age 72, was serving as a volunteer with the Morris County cavalry during this time.

Count how many panes of glass are in the windows. _____

How many rooms did Mary and Temperance Wick live in while General St. Clair stayed with them?

Before you leave the Wick House grounds enjoy the garden with its well-kept variety of fruits, vegetables, herbs and plants which were used for medicines, dyes, seasonings, polishes and cleansers. Most of what you see today are the same items grown by the Wicks.

Name one fruit, one vegetable and one herb that was grown when the Wicks owned the farm.

1. _____

2. _____

3. _____

Now that you completed the Wick House grounds, walk along the left side of the field adjacent to Cemetery Road to pick up the yellow trail markers. This trail is also known as soldier hut trail and leads to the soldiers' huts. It is approx. 1 mile to the soldiers' huts and takes approx. 30 minutes.

The Soldiers' Huts:

Proceed along the yellow trail towards the soldiers' huts. This trail closely follows Cemetery Road as you enter the woods. You'll be walking through a typical New Jersey Forest with Black Walnut, Maples, Oaks, Beeches and Tulip trees towering over you.

At the aqueduct trail intersection, keep to the left on the "yellow" trail. As you journey along the trails you will see low growing bushes. They are known as Japanese Barberry bushes. These "alien" plant species are not native to New Jersey and will gradually take over the environment of plants that belong here.

Where does the barberry bush come from?

Name three trees growing in the park.

- 1. _____
- 2. _____
- 3. _____

When you arrive at the open field (below the Soldiers' Huts) take the time to read the signs explaining the different brigades that were here.

Can you name two different brigades that camped here?

- 1. _____
- 2. _____

What holiday were the men given off for?

Head up the field to the soldiers' huts.

How many bunks do you see? _____

These reconstructed huts represent the soldiers' living conditions. General Washington was very specific in the dimensions for the huts. Each was "14 feet wide, 15-16 feet long, about 6.5 feet high. Any hut not meeting those requirements had to be torn down and started over." The officers' huts were not built until after all the soldiers were in their huts. Can you imagine the field with up to 1,200 huts? This is the number of huts that stood in the winter of 1779-1780. Can you picture yourself living with 11 other people in these small huts? Walk a short distance up the hill to the officer's huts. Do you notice the difference in living conditions?

How many officers lived in a hut?

Soldiers' Huts to Grand Parade

Continue on the yellow trail from the soldiers' huts up and over the hill to Grand Parade Rd. Go left on Grand Parade Rd. to the interpretive signs in front of the Grand Parade. The Grand Parade field is the spot where soldiers lined up daily for inspections. Here officers were checking to make sure the soldiers' guns were in working order and that they had enough ammunition. Imagine this field being 6 times its size during the Revolution. Also in this field soldiers who disobeyed their officers were possibly punished and deserters who were caught risked being hanged. However, General Washington did not like to give the harsher punishments due to the fact the men were already suffering enough. Continue to walk along Grand Parade Rd. (do not follow the yellow trail across the other side of the road) up to Jockey Hollow Rd. You will pick up the blue trail to the right of the restrooms and parking lot. Cross Jockey Hollow Rd.

Grand Parade to Stark's Brigade

At the top of the hill take the blue trail on the right. This area is where the New York brigade encamped to the right. Follow the blue trail down to Cat Swamp Pond on your right. (Morristown Scout Joe Hamfeldt's Eagle project restored the pond shoreline as you see it today) Continue along the blue trail bearing left with Cat Swamp Pond to your right. As you pass the pond, bear to your right to stay on the blue trail (The white trail bears left). You will now proceed up a long gradual hill. At the top of the hill you will turn right at a metal gate marking the park boundary. Walk a short distance along this road with a private house on your left. Please be respectful of the residents here. Just past the house bear left to follow the blue trail. A few minutes down the trail you will come to the Stark's Brigade Monument. The terrible harsh winter weather of 1779-1780 and the protective hills around Morristown worked to the advantage for the Patriots as they endured the winter without an attack. You are now standing on a ridge providing a beautiful view to the east of the Watchung Mountains and New York City. Look across, can you see the top of the Empire State Building and the Freedom Tower? It is easy to see from this vantage point why General Washington chose Jockey Hollow as a strategic location for his troops. Here he could keep a watchful eye on the threat of advancing British troops. General Stark's troops were stationed here to watch for smoke signals warning the countryside of advancing enemy troops. Word would have to get to General Washington as fast as possible.

Continue along the blue trail to the bottom of a hill where you will meet the Old Camp Rd. Trail. Go right. The blue trail will take you past a private residence (yellow house) on your right. A short distance past the house you will come to the Primrose Brook which was the main water source for Stark's troops, as well as the New York and Connecticut brigades. Imagine carrying buckets of water from here all the way back to the soldiers' huts. After crossing over the Primrose Brook Bridge the blue trail continues up a gradual hill returning you to Jockey Hollow Road. When you arrive at Jockey Hollow Rd turn left onto the road across Trail Center parking lot which will be on your right. Looking at the parking lot from Jockey Hollow Rd. take the yellow trail on the left side of the lot heading back towards the Wick Farm and visitor center.

Trail Center to the Visitor Center

Go over a little bridge across to Primrose Brook. Take a left at the head of the aqueduct trail. Do not go on the aqueduct trail to the right. Just past the aqueduct trail bear right just beyond the Jockey Hollow Rd. where you will continue on the yellow blazed Grand Parade Trail uphill. You are now walking between the camps of the first and second Maryland brigades. (There will be a trail to your left, take this back onto Jockey Hollow Rd) Continue walking up hill on the road. Look for the small headstone marking the grave of Captain Bettin who was accidentally killed during the mutiny of the Pennsylvania line. (It is on the left side of the road across from the Wick farm field fence). Scouts can now salute Captain Bettin. Just past Captain Bettin's grave you will see the visitor center and Wick house on your right. Make sure you get your Jockey Hollow Award application stamped by the Park Ranger before leaving the park.

What was Captain Bettin's first name?

Morristown National Historical Park

The Ford Mansion first became a museum in 1876, operated by the Washington Association. Combined with Fort Nonsense and Jockey Hollow, it became our nation's first National Historical Park in 1933 and has been an important destination for Scouts for almost 100 years. The Patriots' Path Council is proud to support the park and its outstanding educational programs.
